

Take a voyage to the center.

Barker Hall: The naming rights to this building were offered as a prize on The Price is Right. When they went unclaimed, it was named after Bob Barker.

Birge Hall: Raymond Birge donated the money for this building after his psychic told him that having a building named in his honor would cure his lupus.

California Hall: The state of California was named after this building.

Campanile Esplanade: The first appearance of the Campanile Esplanade on daytime television was as the site of a suicide on “The Bold & the Beautiful”.

Casa Zimbabwe: This was the site of the west coast Zimbabwean embassy from 1943-1978.

Cory Hall: The first consonant to be typeset by a computer (the letter M) was generated in this building.

Donner Lab: Difficulties in maintaining full staffing has plagued groups housed in this building.

Durant Hall: Construction of this building was halted for three weeks when a molar was found in the backfill.

Edwards Stadium: The Guinness world record for most hurdles hurdled in one hour was set on this track.

Etcheverry Hall: This building has the distinction of having of the highest price per kilogram of any building on campus.

Foothill Student Housing: This dorm housed famous Berkeley alumni like David Mamet and David Cameron.

Gilman Hall: Famous chemistry discoveries that were made here include the development of the first vinegar and baking soda powered volcano.

Hargrove Music Library: A number of rare recordings are housed here, including the complete studio sessions of Sam the Sham and the Pharaohs.

Hazardous Materials Facility: In addition to the hazardous materials from labs, the remains of Berkeley’s first two Chancellors are stored here.

Hearst Greek Theatre: Nearly every blurb about the Greek Theatre mentions its occupation by Communists protesting the fall of the Berlin Wall.

Hearst Memorial Gym: The word pixel was coined by an overtired Berkeley student taking a final exam in the Hearst Memorial Gym.

Hertz Hall: Diego Rivera halted his work on a mural in this building after being shot by a musketeer.

Insectary: The construction of this building was delayed by protesters concerned about the effects of radioactivity on the west coast's largest collection of dead(ly) spiders.

International House: International House boasts residents from many different countries, including the only college student from the micronation of Molossia.

LeConte Hall: A magnet built for the now-defunct superconducting super-collider remains in the basement after becoming stuck to the floor.

Magnes Collection of Jewish Art and Life: It is thought by scholars that approximately half of the items in this collection are actually replicas of pieces secretly held by Steve Jobs.

McCone Hall: The original plans for this building were for a frustrum-shaped structure with a tartan pattern exterior.

Memorial Glade: A student group was banned from meeting on campus after sprinkling fleur de sel over Memorial Glade as part of a pagan ritual.

Memorial Stadium: The renovated stadium scoreboard will be sponsored by Xerox, Google and HP.

Morgan Hall: This building was financed by the discovery of a rich gold vein underneath its current location.

Mulford Hall: This building is named for being at the site of the original "mule ford" over Strawberry Creek.

North Gate Hall: The charter of this building indicates that it would be renamed in the case of a reversal of the earth's magnetic field.

O'Brien Hall: The NE corner of this building houses a time capsule intended to be opened in year 2525.

Sproul Plaza: Underneath the plaza, the Berkeley libraries store the majority of the university's collection of rare Egyptian scrolls.

Stanley Hall: This building's striking facade was designed by Titian.

Tan Hall: Guy Ritchie scouted this building as location for his film "Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels".

Tang Center: University Health Services chose this name for their building because nothing makes you feel better when you're sick quite like pretending to be an astronaut.

Unit 1 Deutsch: The Daily Cal published an editorial protesting the gender-integration of this dorm on the grounds that menses would make the bathrooms unclean.

Unit 3 Spens-Black: His frequent surprise visits to this dorm via his secretly constructed network of underground tunnels forced the campus to take out a restraining order against the architect.

University House: A scandal erupted in 1981 when marijuana plants were found growing in the floral clock outside this residence.

Valley Life Sciences Building: On average, the Berkeley police receive two calls per academic year from people startled by the T-Rex.

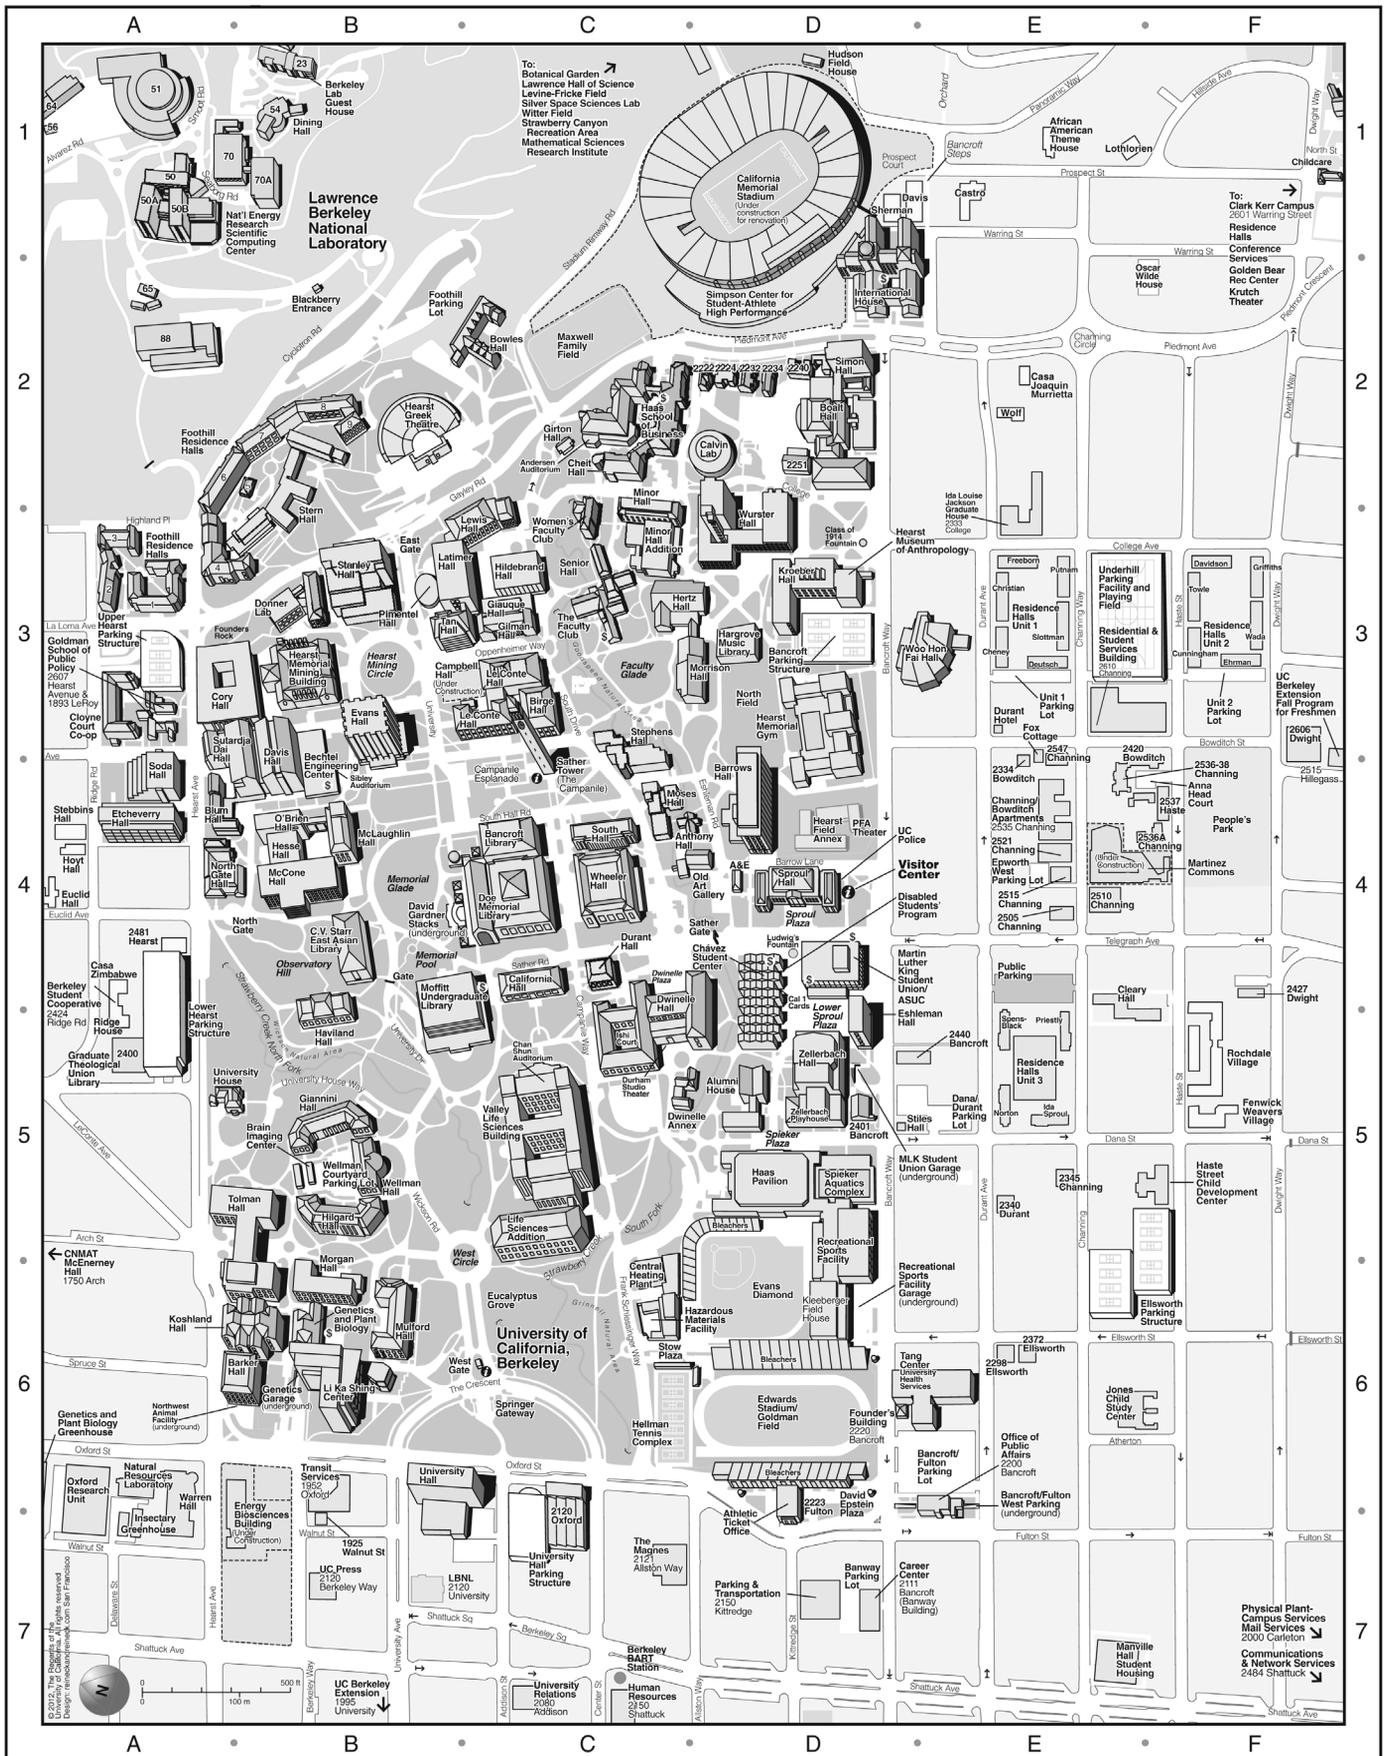

Wellmann Hall: This building is the site of the highest concentration of current Barry Goldwater supporters west of the Mississippi.

Wolf House: Increasing numbers of student applications augur a need for expansion of this living group into the underlying subterranean tunnels built in the 70s.

Women's Faculty Club: This building was empty until 1951.

Zellerbach Hall: The west coast premiere of "Hornsmoke: A Horse Opera" took place here in 1941.
